Model and TV presenter

Rosie Van Amerogen (AKA Rosie Viva) is a 26 year old model who lives in London - her glamorous day job has taken her around the world working for the likes of Gucci and Yves Saint Laurent, but having been diagnosed with Bipolar a couple of years ago, her real passion is changing the tide when it comes to people, especially young people, feeling they can talk about neuro diversity both within the creative industries and further afield. 2023 will see her becoming the subject of a C4 digital documentary charting her day to day experiences living with BiPolar, while C4 are hopeful that she is the next "face of mental health" for the channel.

Music and fitness are two things that are proven to improve mental, physical and social wellbeing and they are certainly both a passion and a priority for Rosie - she can be seen hosting backstage at many a festival but also has a great interest in classical music and its benefits.

With first hand experience of what it is like to live with a neuro diverse mind, Rosie wants to inform and educate her audience on both the condition itself, and the incredible power that both music and fitness hold for not only her but all of us.
